In this week's video (watch here), we break down what's behind the continued move to all-time highs in the stock market and why upcoming bank earnings could be the most important to watch. As the rally broadens globally, AI adoption is beginning to lift sectors beyond tech. But beneath the surface, signs of structural change are growing—led by capital flowing into AI-native startups and tokenized business models. Venture capitalist Vinod Khosla warns that the 2030s may be a graveyard for Fortune 500 firms unable to reinvent themselves fast enough.

We cover the pressure building on the Fed to cut rates, the weakening labor market signals that could justify it, and the broader transformation underway in crypto, energy, and AI infrastructure. From Meta's all-in superintelligence push to Ethereum's role in tokenizing real-world assets, the episode connects the dots between exponential tech and the unraveling of legacy systems. The future isn't coming—it's being priced in right now.
